Dissertation

Title Joint Action and Communication, With a Focus on Demonstratives
Summary An important aspect of human nature is our engagement with one another; we do things together. My dissertation aims to shed some more light on our social nature by addressing joint attention and linguistic communication—two special types of our joint engagement. I begin at a general level by explaining their normative profile in a way that is heavily informed by empirical work. With a general framework in place, I then turn to demonstrative communication: a fundamental form of linguistic communication that occurs via demonstrative expressions—words such as “this” and “that”.
